

Grant Report - BACCN Annual Conference 2025, Blackpool - Lynsey Russell

Attending the BACCN conference this year was an inspiring experience that offered valuable opportunities to connect with fellow critical care professionals, share best practices, and learn from leading voices in the field.

I particularly enjoyed the sessions focused on innovation in nursing leadership and the collaborative spirit throughout the event.

One of the highlights for me was the session on sustainability in critical care, which sparked ideas for initiating a sustainability-focused project within our department. It was inspiring to see how small changes can make a meaningful impact and impressive savings, especially in the current climate.

Being a member of BACCN means being part of a passionate community that champions excellence, innovation, collaboration and continuous improvement in critical care - something I deeply value in my role. I am proud to contribute to and learn from such a dedicated network.
