

THANK - YOU

34th Annual BACCN Conference
16 & 17 September 2019, Edinburgh International Conference Centre
Moral Courage: Meeting the Challenges of a Contemporary Healthcare System

Over the two days of conference the BACCN conference team brought together critical care practitioners and specialists from across the United Kingdom and other countries. The theme was Moral Courage, which I thought was very topical in this current climate.

As part of the BACCN's strategic goals is to develop critical care nursing practice, it was evident in this conference that they are committed to support research and service evaluation / improvement project endeavors where possible. The BACCN have an extensive communication network with professionals and social media was used throughout the conference.

The social programme was open to all conference participants, and included dinner and dancing. In addition to Thank you' speeches, formal recognition was given to the Regional members who had helped with the work of BACCN

A challenge I had was deciding what presentations to attend and how to fit it all in. The key note speakers were thought provoking and included the critical care team from Salisbury and Christie Watson (a novelist with a special interest in nursing)

Thank you very much to the entire team of BACCN for such a great conference and for the grant that helped towards my expenses from Pakistan
